History is an integral part of every profession. In the Czech lands, the pharmaceutical historiography began to develop in the 19th century. It fully established itself as a scientific discipline in the early 20th century, mainly due to work of pharmacist Emil Šedivý. Optional lectures on history of pharmacy became available for pharmacy students from 1920s. Subject History of Pharmacy was introduced into the curriculum in 1953, a year after the establishment of independent faculties of pharmacy at universities in Brno and Bratislava. Over the time, it has undergone several changes in name and extent. At present, the history of pharmacy is a part of curricula of pharmaceutical education in the Czech Republic, both as a compulsory subject and an optional broadening course. Teaching the history of pharmacy has been closely connected with the Czech Pharmaceutical Museum since its establishment in 1994.
